

Sinclair Broadcasting seems clearly to be violating the law requiring public airwaves to serve the public interest by their decision to require their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary shortly before the national election. If they also show an anti-Bush documentary during the same time frame this action would be acceptable. Otherwise it is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation. Because large companies control the airwaves, we may see only those programs which potentially benefit the company rather than all of those which will benefit the public, as they are supposed to be charged. Thank you.
